spring - time, when the earth was young, And Nature, like a maiden beautiful, At sight of her own loveliness rejoiced, Our father, Jubal, from his tent came forth To greet the morning sun with cheerful heart.

Adown the spangled vale he wandered slow, His shadow, long and large, unnumbered flow'rs Eclipsing as he moved, while they full soon, As still he moved, laughed back into the light.

So passing on, his fingers idly touched

The strings that made the music of his shell, When straightway issued sounds in Nature's haunts Ne'er heard.

Full careless harmonies were they, Their skill unguided by a mind attent,

But as they rose and filled the air, the birds Gave heed, and all their warblings died away To silence deep. Among the trembling leaves The Zephyrs, listening, paused, while e'en the flow'rs, Forsaking due allegiance to the sun, Their bright eyes turned towards the fount Of notes so strange and sweet.

At length the strings With faltering cadence slowly came to rest,

And Nature all her voices found again ;

Uplifting to the shining heavens a rival song, Which hearing, Jubal stood in great amaze, As one who, looking on familiar scenes, Discerns new beauties, unsuspect before.

He, listening,

marked no imperfection there—

The deep-voiced torrent

{and the tinkling
rill;

The swelling breezes and the whispering trees;

The buzzing

insects and the choirs of birds,

With all things that are vocal, each in form

Complete and full did magnify the Lord.

Upon a bank down-sinking, Jubal marked The mighty concert, and his heart was sad.

Moderato. ♩ = 76.

"O Thou," he cried, "who like unto Thyself Didst make Thy noblest work, this creature, Man, And give him thoughts that soar above the heavens, Emotions keen, and aspirations strong, With love of Thee, which needs must move His soul to rapture and his voice to praise—

Why him deny the power that these possess? Refusing the expression meet of all . That crowns him chief among created things.

My feeble strains fall short of my intent; This poor, weak shell my lofty purpose mocks, And I,

with reason most to praise Thy Name,

In Earth's great chorus take the meanest part!

{Is thus Thy will complete?} or is it, Lord, That, in the ages coming,

Man shall find A perfect utterance through the art divine Which now but lisps as with an infant's

So wills the Power Divine, because from thee, As from a fount exhaustless, shall the art That's noblest, who, next, Before the wondering eyes of Jubal, waved The golden palm-branch that he bore, when, lo !
