BITS OF POETRY

"From very ancient times, the writing of short poems has been practiced in Japan even more as a moral duty than as a mere literary art.

"The common art-principle of the class of poems under present consideration is identical with the common principle of Japanese pictorial illustration. By the use of a few chosen words, the composer of a short poem endeavors to do exactly what the painter endeavors to do with a few strokes of the brush,—to evoke an image or a mood,—to revive a sensation or an emotion. And the accomplishment of this purpose, by the poet or picture-maker, depends altogether upon the capacity to suggest, and only to suggest. A Japanese artist would be condemned for attempting elaboration of detail in a sketch intended to recreate the memory of some landscape seen through the blue haze of a spring morning, or under the great blond light of an autumn afternoon. Not only would he be false to the traditions of his art; he would necessarily defeat his own end thereby. In the same way a poet would be condemned for attempting completeness of utterance in a very short poem; his object should be only to stir imagination without satisfying it. So the term 'Ittakiri', meaning 'all gone', or 'entirely vanished' in the sense of 'all told', is contemptuously applied to verses in which the verse-maker has uttered his whole thought, praise being reserved for the compositions that leave in the mind the thrilling of something left unsaid. Like the single stroke of a temple-bell, the perfect short poem should set murmuring and undulating in the mind of the hearer many a ghostly aftertone of long duration."
