Droop'd is thy gay wing, thy home is not here,
 Oh hie thee, away, to a far brighter sphere,
 Around thee no blossoms in beauty shine forth,
 Dark, stern, and cold is the once springing earth,
 And the bird of the forest hath mark'd thee its prey,
 Child of the sunbeam, away, away.

Child of the summer, oh! dost thou not fear,
 The heralding blast of the dark closing year?
 Oh! heed not the treacherous blue of the sky,
 Nor linger, it lureth thee forth but to die,—
 Like the cold world smiling—oh! why wilt thou stay?
 Child of the sunbeam, away, away.
