T hath been the Fate of most of the Arts to have advanced by slow Degrees to a certain Point of Excellence, which to preserve bath proved as difficult as it was to acquire. Modern Music was first methodized by GUIDO ARETINE, and received but little known Improvement for several Centuries after. At the Time that Italy produced the great Painters, some of their best Musicians flourished. We in England begun a little later, for it was not until the Reign of ELIZABETH that we had any Music to stand in Competition with the Italian. In my Opinion the Advances were very slow for some Years after, and tho' GIBBONS did something, PURCEL was the Man who first apparently improved Air, the great Support of modern Music. PURCEL is still a favourite Author, and will continue so; for his Genius was of the first Rate, tho' much disguised by the false Ornaments of the Age in which he lived. His imitating the Sound of the Words, rather than expressing the Thought of the Sentence*; his frequent Repetitions of the same Word†, Divisions numberless, and some almost endless, were taken up by the Composers of the Times, who not having Genius enough to imitate his Excellences, took the easier Task of copying his Faults. This might probably have prevented, at least retarded the further Improvement of Music, had not Mr. HANDEL most seasonably made his Appearance. He introduced and established a new Species, which I am afraid will soon be taken from the public Ear; and live only in Memory, or in the private Performance of those who dare to be unfashionable. He brought Air to its Perfection; and tho' he has been happily imitated by a few, which perhaps may a little while delay a total Degeneracy, it is but too certain, that we are getting into as frivolous and trifling a Taste as ever existed.

M. VOLTAIRE remarks, 'La Musique aujourd'hui n'est plus que l'art d'exécuter des choses difficiles.' There is much Reason in this Observation, for at present the Art of * Tho' I have mentioned this as a Fault of PURCEL, yet it is almost an universal Practice, and has continued, from the first Attempts towards Expression, to the present Time. PURCEL indeed may be justly blamed for giving the Sanction of his Authority to what is in itself absurd.

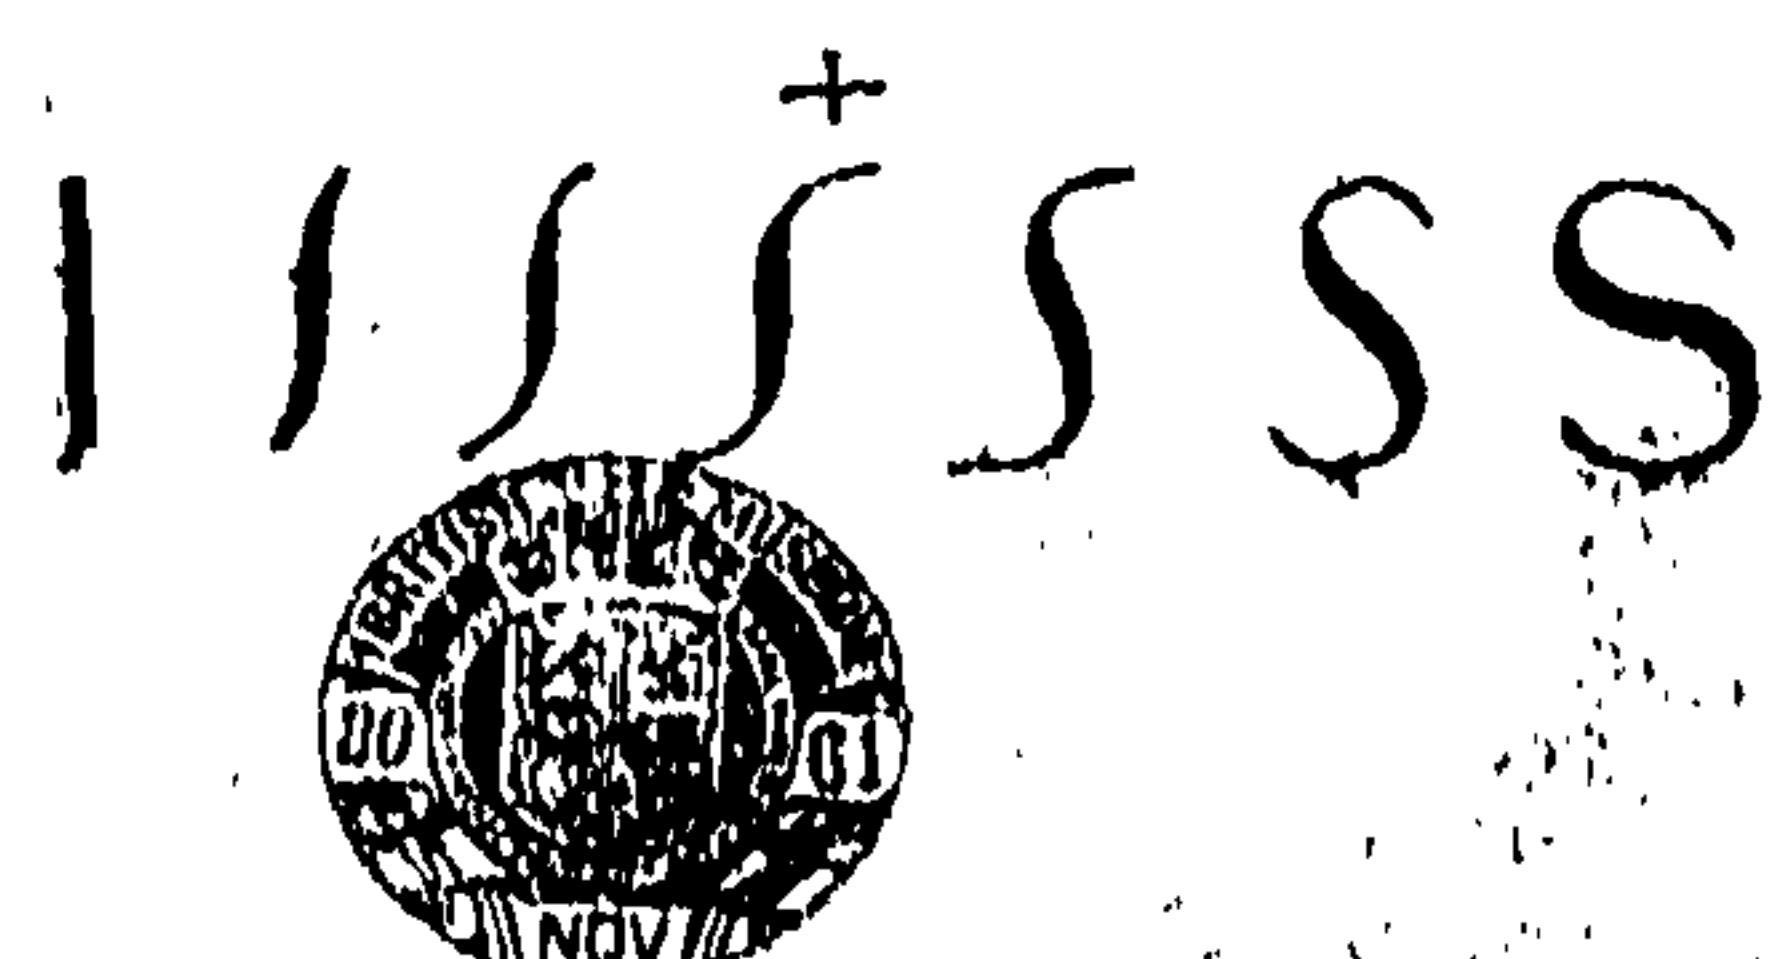

† Sometimes it is impossible to avoid repeating Part of a Sentence, but then it should be the most expressive Part of it, and the Passion to be excited should be more and more enforced at each Repetition.

playing upon Instruments, is rather the Art of playing Tricks with them. Singing is in the same corrupted State. What dreadful Howlings have I heard, which I could never have imagined to proceed from an human Throat, if my Eyes would have permitted me to doubt it! In our Taste we have certainly gone beyond the Mark. Last Winter I carried a sensible young Fellow of the Country to a public Performance, who had scarce ever heard any other Music than the Fiddle of his Dancing-Master. At a Cadence when one of the Female Singers was indulging herself and the Audience with a Shake  of a Mile, my Gentleman burst into a violent Laugh. Upon being asked the Reason; who can forbear, says he, that Lady has been laughing in my Face this Half-hour. May we not suppose then, as the Observation came from unadulterated Nature, that tho' a moderate Shake is agreeable, a long one is ridiculous? The Swell is carried to the same Extravagance. Why do all who are honoured with the Title of Great Singers; Prodigious Creatures, &c. &c. almost constantly affect, particularly in slow Movements, to be behind the Time, and sing any Intervals but the true? Intervals which would have puzzled ALYPIUS to express, had he even turned the Greek Letters inside out, and made DEMOIVRE acknowledge, that they were beyond the Reach of his Numbers. For what Character, what Ratio will express a gradual Slide from the Unison to an out-of-tune Octave? ---- It is not my Intention to enter into a Detail of all the Extravagancies that have of late been deforming one of the most agreeable of the Arts: I have just hinted at a few, and have already said more upon the Subject, than I at first intended.

When we would make a crooked Stick straight, we bend it as much the contrary Way. ---- If it should become fashionable to perform Music as plain and unadorned, as what is now offered to the Public, (and Fashion has worked greater Miracles) perhaps our Taste might at last settle in a proper Medium. The easier to attain this End, in some Pieces I have endeavoured to unite the Air of the Moderns, to the plain substantial Harmony of the Ancients. In others, the Melody, as well as the Harmony, is rather antique: And in some Passages, the modern Improvements, in respect to the Management and Succession of Discords, are introduced, and, I hope, with Effect. As this, possibly, is the only real Improvement in Harmony of late, it is a Pity it is not solely applied to the Effect it seems so admirably adapted to produce, viz. to excite the Ideas of Pain, Terror, &c. for surely the contrary can never be produced from the most discordant Sounds that can be combined, where Art has any Share in the Combination.

It is the Business of Art to dress Nature to Advantage. ---- This Maxim should never be forgotten by the Musician, any more than by the Painter or Sculptor. Nature unadorned is lovely, but I think that she may wear many Ornaments, and still be so: The Skill is in knowing when there is enough, and in disposing with Elegance what Judgment has chosen; tho' if we are in doubt, I think it better to be deficient than to overcharge. Mr. HOGARTH has something in his Analysis of Beauty exactly to the present Purpose: it is where he goes gradually from a straight Line to an exaggerated double Curve; thus,

s, and justly; that the middle one is the most graceful. The next in Beauty is undoubtedly the preceding one. This is no bad Illustration of the ancient and modern Music. We will call the first Line the Age of GUIDO. The second that of BULL, TALLIS, &c. The middle one expresses the Compositions of HANDEL, and perhaps a few others; and one of the following, (I hope, not the last) our present crooked Deviation from the true Line of Beauty.

I would just observe, that the following Pieces will lose their Effect, when the Parts are doubled. The Manner of Performance I would recommend, is by three Voices singing moderately soft, and accompanied with any Bass Instrument that may have the Effect of an Accompaniment only; for nothing hurts a Piece so much, as making a Part principal, or equal with others, when it was intended to be subservient. The Equality of Strength among the Voices should be also observed: If one Voice of the three be strong, and the others weak, it is necessary to soften it down, that the Ballance may not be destroyed; for it should always be remembered, that as no principal Part was intended, there must be none produced.

The critical Observer will see some Combinations of Discords and Successions of Harmony a little out of the beaten Track. I must confess, that there appears to me no necessity of being confined to the present Accompaniments, when others may be introduced with Effect. It is needless to point out the Passages hinted at, as they shew themselves; tho' perhaps it is necessary to say that there are such, lest what the Author intended for Beauties (tho' he may be wrong in his Judgment) might be censured as unders.

Some of these Pieces have been handed about in Manuscript, under the Title of Madrigals, the Name I first called them by; but, upon examining their Subject, I found they might with more Propriety be called Elegies; for tho' the Madrigal is sometimes tragic, it is not always so; besides, to confess the Truth, I had some Fear that from the Name it might be apprehended I had adopted the Taste of the Times when the Madrigal flourished, which was never my Intention.

This Species of Composition appears to me very difficult to succeed in, for I imagine its Characteristic to be Elegant Simplicity. The Subject should be tender and pathetic --- the Air chaste and affecting --- The Melody easy --- The Harmony full --- The Definition of the Parts learned, but not formal; and from the Union of the whole, must be produced Effect, the ultimate End of Music. Tho' perhaps I am making Laws for my own Condemnation, yet it is esteemed laudable even to fail in attempting great things; and whatever may be the Fate of these Pieces, I shall think my Time in composing them well bestowed, if they should prove a Hint to some better Artist to do something more effectual towards the Reformation of our present Taste.

*** Lately Published, by the AUTHOR of these Pieces, TWELVE
SONGS, the Second Edition; and SIX SONATAS for the Harpsichord, accompanied with a Violin.
