BEING THE

SECOND PART

OF THE

BEGGAR'S OPERA.

Written by Mr. GAY.

LONDON:

Printed for the AUTHOR. M DCC XXIX.

FTER Mr. Rich and I were agreed upon terms and conditions for A bringing this Piece on the stage, and that every thing was ready for à Rehearfal ; The Lord Chamberlain fent an order from the country to probibit Mr. Rich to suffer any Play to be rebears'd upon his stage till it had been first of all supervis'd by his Grace. As soon as Mr. Rich came from his Grace's fecretary (who had fent for him to receive the before-mentioned order) he came to my lodgings and acquainted me with the orders be bad received.

Upon the Lord Chamberlain's coming to town, I was confined by fickness, but in four or five days I went abroad on purpose to wait upon his Grace with a faithful and genuine copy of this Piece, excepting the erratas of the transcriber.

It was transcribed in great haste by Mr. Stede the Prompter of the Playbouse, that it might be ready against his Grace's return from the country: As my illness at that time would not allow me to read it over, I fince find in it many small faults, and here and there a line or two omitted. But lest it should be faid I had made any one alteration from the copy I deliver'd to the Lord Chamberlain : I have caused every error in the faid copy to be printed (litteral faults excepted) and have taken notice of every omission. I have also pointed out every amendment I have made upon the revifal of my own copy for the Prefs, that the reader may at one view fee what alterations and amendments have been made.

As I have heard several suggestions and false infinuations concerning the copy: I take this occasion in the most folemn manner to affirm, that the very copy I delivered to Mr. Rich was written in my own band some months before at the Bath from my own first foul blotted papers , from this, that for the Playboufe was transcribed, from whence the above-mention'd Mr. Stede copied that which I delivered to the Lord Chamberlain, and excepting my own foul blotted papers; I do protest I know of no other copy what sever, than those I have mention'd.

The Copy I gave into the hands of Mr. Rich had been feen before by feveral Persons of the greatest distinction and veracity, who will be ready to do me the honour and justice to attest it; so that not only by them, but by Mr. Rich and Mr. Stede, I can (against all infinuation or pofitive affirmation) prove in the most clear and undeniable manner, if occasion required, what I have here upon my own honour and credit afferted. The Introduction indeed was not shown to the Lord Chamberlain, which, as I had not then quite fettled, was never transcribed in the Playhouse copy.

Twas on Saturday morning December 7th, 1728. That I waited upon the Lord Chamberlain ; I defir'd to have the bonour of reading the Opera to bis Grace, but he order'd me to leave it with him, which I did upon expectation of baving it return'd on the Monday following, but I had it not 'till Thursday December 12, when I receiv'd it from his Grace with this answer; that it was not allow'd to be afted, but commanded to be supprest. This was told me in general without any reasons assign'd, or any charge against me of my baving given any particular offence.

Since this probibition I have been told that I am accused, in general terms, of having written many disaffected libels and seditious pamphlets. As it hath ever been my utmost ambition (if that word may be us'd upon this occasion) to lead a quiet and inoffensive life, I thought my innocence in this particular would never have requir'd a juftification; and as this kind of writing is, what I have ever detested and never practiced, I am perfunded fo groundless a calumny can never be believ'd but by those who do not know me. But when general afperfious of this fort have been cast upon me, I think my-felf call'a upon to declare my principles; and I do with the firidest truth affirm, that I am as loyal a subject and as firmly attach'd to the prefent happy establishment as any of those who have the greatest places or pensions. I have been informed too, that in the following Play, I have been charg'd with writing immoralities; that it is fill'd with slander and calumny against particular great persons, and that Majesty it-felf is endeavour'd to be brought into ridicule and contempt.

As I knew that every one of these charges was in every point absolutely salse and without the least grounds, at first I was not at all assected by them; but when I sound they were still insisted upon, and that particular passages which were not in the Play were quoted and propagated to support what had been suggested, I could no longer bear to be under these sale accusations; so by printing it, I have submitted and given up all present views of prosit which might accrue from the stage, which undoubtedly will be some satisfaction to the worthy gentlemen who have treated me with so much candour and humanity, and represented me in such savourable colours.

But as I am confcious to my-felf that my only intention was to lash in general the reigning and fashionable vices, and to recommend and set wirtue in as amiable a light as I could; to justify and vindicate my own charatter, I thought my-felf obliged to print the Opera without delay in the manner I have done.

As the Play was principally design'd for representation, I hope when it is read it will be considered in that light: And when all that hath been said against it shall appear to be intirely misunderstood or misrepresented; if, some time hence, it should be permitted to appear on the stage, I think it necessary to acquaint the publick, that as far as a contrast of this kind can be binding; I am engag'd to Mr. Rich to have it represented upon his Theatre.

INTRODUCTION.

POET. PLAYER.

Poet. A Sequel to a Play is like more last words. 'Tis a kind of absurdity; and really, Sir, you have prevail'd upon me to pursue this subject against my judgment.

1st Player. Be the fuccess as it will, you are fure of what you have contracted for; and upon the inducement of gain no body can blame you for undertaking it.

Poet. I know, I must have been look'd upon as whimsical, and particular if I had serupled to have risqu'd my reputation for my profit; for why should I be more squeamish than my betters? and so, Sir, contrary to my opinion I bring Polly once again upon the Stage.

1st Player. Confider, Sir, you have prepostession on your side.

Poet. But then the pleasure of novelty is lost; and in a thing of this kind I am afraid I shall hardly be pardon'd for imitating my-felf, for sure pieces of this fort are not to be followed as precedents. My dependance, like a tricking bookseller's, is, that the kind reception the first part met with will carry off the second be it what it will.

If Player. You should not disparage your own works; you will have criticks enough who will be glad to do that for you: and let me tell you, Sir, after the fuccess you have had, you must expect envy.

Poet. Since I have had more applause than I can deserve, I must, with other authors, be content, if criticks allow me less. I should be an arrant courtier or an arrant beggar indeed, if as soon as I have receiv'd one undeserved favour I should lay claim to another; I don't slatter my-felf with the like success.

tst. Player. I hope, Sir, in the catastrophe you have not run into the abfurdity of your last Piece.

Poet. I know that I have been unjustly accus'd of having given up my moral for a joke, like a fine gentleman in conversation; but whatever be the event now, I will not fo much as feen to give up my moral.

:[I Player.]

INTRODUCTION.

1st Player. Really, Sir, an author should comply with the customs and tafte of the town. - I am indeed afraid too that your Satyr here and there is too free. A man should be cautious how he mentions any vice whatfoever before good company, left fomebody prefent should apply it to himself.

Poet. The Stage, Sir, hath the privilege of the pulpit to attack vice however dignified or diftinguish'd, and preachers and poets should not be too well bred upon these occasions: Nobody can overdo it when he attacks the vice and not the perfon.

1st Player. But how can you hinder malicious applications?

Poet. Let those answer for 'em who make 'em. I aim at no particular persons; my strokes are at vice in general: but if any men particularly vicious are hurt, I make no apology, but leave them to the cure of their flatterers. If an author write in character, the lower people reflect on the follies and vices of the rich and great, and an Indian judges and talks of Europeans by those he hath seen and convers'd with, &c. And I will venture to own that I wish every man of power or riches were really and apparently virtuous, which would foon amend and reform the common people who act by imitation.

1st Player. But a little indulgence and partiality to the vices of your own country without doubt would be look'd upon as more difcreet. Though your Satyr, Sir, is on vices in general, it must and will give offence; every vicious man thinks you particular, for confcience will make felf-application. And why will you make your-felf fo many enemies? I say no more upon this head. As to us I hope you are fatisfy'd we have done all we could for you; for you will now have the advantage of all our best fingers.

Enter 2d Player.

2d Player. 'Tis impossible to perform the Opera to night, all the fine fingers within are out of humour with their parts. The Tenor, fays he was never offer'd fuch an indignity, and in a rage flung his clean lambskin gloves into the fire; he swears that in his whole life he never did fing, would fing, or could fing but in true kid.

1/1 Player. Musick might tame and civilize wild beasts, but 'tis evident it never yet could tame and civilize muficians.

Enter 3d Player,

3d Player. Sir, Signora Crotebetta fays the finds her character to low that she had rather dye than sing it.

INTRODUCTION.

Ift Player. Tell her by her contract I can make her fing it.

Enter Signora Crotchetta.

Crotchetta. Barbarous Tramontane! Where are all the lovers of Virtu? Will they not all rise in arms in my defence? make me fing it! good Gods! frould I tamely submit to such usege I should debase my-self through all Europe.

the Player. In the Opera nine or ten years ago, I remember, Madam, your appearance in a character little better than a fish.

Crotchetta. A fish! monstrous! Let me inform you, Sir, that a Mermaid or Syren is not many removes from a fea-Goddefs; or I had never fubmitted to be that fifth which you are pleas'd to call me by way of reproach. I have a cold, Sir; I am fick, I don't fee, why I may not be allowed the privilege of fickness now and then as well as others. If a finger may not be indulg'd in her humours, I am fure the will foon become of no confequence with the town. And fo, Sir, I have a cold; I am hourse. I hope now you are satisfied.

[Exit Crotchetta in a fury.

Enter 4th Player.

4th Player. Sir, the base voice infists upon pearl-colour'd stockings and red-heel'd shoes.

1st Player. There is no governing caprice. But how shall we make our excuses to the house?

4th Player. Since the town was last year so good as to encourage an Opera without fingers; the favour I was then shown obliges me to offer my-felf once more, rather than the audience should be difmis'd. All the other Comedians upon this emergency are willing to do their best, and hope for your favour and indulgence.

tst Player. Ladies and Gentlemen, as we wish to do every thing for your diversion, and that fingers only will come when they will come, we beg you to excuse this unforeseen accident, and to accept the propofal of the Comedians, who relye wholly on your courtesse and protection. Excunt.

ACT I. SCENE I.

SCENE DUCAT'S House.

DUCAT. TRAPES.

Hough you were born and bred and live in the Indies, as you are a subject of Britain you shou'd live up to our customs. Prodigality there, is a fashion that is among all ranks of people. Why, our very younger brothers push themselves into the polite world by squandering more than they are worth. You are wealthy, very wealthy, Mr. Ducat; and I grant you the more you have, the taste of getting more should grow stronger upon you. 'Tis just so with us. But then the richest of our Lords and Gentlemen, who live elegantly, always run out. 'Tis genteel to be in debt. Your luxury should distinguish you from the vulgar. You cannot be too expensive in your pleasures.

Duçat. I never thought to have heard thrift laid to my charge. There is not a man, though I say it, in all the Indies who lives more plentifully than my felf; nor, who enjoys the necessaries of life in so handsome Trapes. There it is now. Who ever heard a man of fortune in England talk of the necessaries of life? If the necessaries of life would have fatisfied fuch a poor body as me, to be fure I had never come to mend my fortune to the Plantations. Whether we can afford it or no, we must have superfluities. We never flint our expence to our own fortunes, but are miserable if we do not live up to the profuseness of our neighbours. If we could content our felves with the necessaries of Life, no man alive ever need be dishonest. As to woman now; why, look ye, Mr. Ducat, a man hath what we may call every thing that is necessary in a wife.

Trapes. But for all that, d'ye see, your married men are my best. customers. It keeps wives upon their good behaviours.

Ducat. But there are jealousles and family lectures, Mrs. Trapes.

Trapes. Blefs us all I how little are our customs known on this side the herring-pond! Why, jealoufy is out of fashion even among our common country-gentlemen. I hope you are better bred than to be jealous. A husband and wife should have a mutual complaifance for each other. Sure, your wife is not fo unreasonable to expect to have you always to her felf.

Ducat. As I have a good effate, Mrs. Trapes, I would willingly run into every thing that is fuitable to my dignity and fortune. No body throws himself into the extravagancies of life with a freer spirit. As to conscience and musty morals, I have as few drawbacks upon my profits or pleasures as any man of quality in England; in those I am not in the least vulgar. Befides, Madam, in most of my expences I run into the polite taffe. I have a fine library of books that I never read; I have a fine stable of horses that I never ride; I build, I buy plate, jewels, pictures, or any thing that is valuable and curious, as your great men do, merely out of oftentation. But indeed I must own, I do still cohabit with my wife; and she is very uneasy and vexatious upon account of

A& I. An OPERA.

Trapes. Indeed, indeed, Mr. Ducat, you shou'd break through all this usurpation at once, and keep -... Now too is your time; for I have a fresh cargo of ladies just arriv'd : no body alive shall set eyes upon 'em till you have provided your felf. You should keep your lady in awe by her maid; place a handsome, sprightly wench near your wife, and she will be a fpy upon her into the bargain. I would have you show your felf a fine gentleman in every thing.

Ducat. But I am fomewhat advanc'd in life, Mrs. Trapes, and my duty to my wife lies very hard upon me; I must leave keeping to younger husbands and old batchelors.

Trapes. There it is again now! Our very vulgar pursue pleasures in the flush of youth and inclination, but our great men are modifuly profligate when their appetite hath left 'em.

AIR II. The Irish ground.

BASS.

Ducat. What can wealth When we're old? Youth and bealth Are not fold.

TREBLE.

Trapes. When love in the pulse beats low, (As haply it may with you) A girl can fresh youth bestow, And kindle defire anew. Thus, numm'd in the brake, Without motion, the Inake Sleeps cold winter away; But in every vein Life quickens again On the bosom of May.

We are not here, I must tell you, as we are at London, where we can have fresh goods every week by the waggon. My maid is again gone aboard the veffel; she is perfectly charm'd with one of the ladies; 'twill be a credit to you to keep her. I have obligations to you, Mr. Ducat, and I would part with her to no man alive but your felf. If I had her at London, such a lady would be sufficient to make my fortune; but, in truth, she is not impudent enough to make herself agreeable to the sailors in a publick-house in this country. By, all accounts, she hath a behaviour only sit for a private family.

Ducat. But how shall I manage matters with my wife?

Trapes. Just as the fine gentlemen do with us. We could bring you many great precedents for treating a wife with indifference, contempt, and neglect; but that, indeed, would be running into too high life. I would have you keep some decency, and use her with civility. You should be so obliging as to leave her to her liberties and take them too yourself. Why, all our fine ladies, in what they call pin-money, have no other views; 'tis what they all expect.

Ducat. But I am afraid it will be hard to make my wife think like a gentlewoman upon this fubject; fo that if I take her, I must act discreetly and keep the affair a dead fecret.

Trapes. As to that, Sir, you may do as you pleafe. Should it ever come to her knowledge, custom and education perhaps may make her at first think it somewhat odd. But this I can affirm with a safe conscience, that many a lady of quality have servants of this sort in their families, and you can afford an expence as well as the best of 'em.

Ducat. I have a fortune, Mrs. Trapes, and would fain make a fafhionable figure in life; if we can agree upon the price Pll take her into the family.

Trapes. I am glad to fee you fling your felf into the polite tafte with a fpirit. Few, indeed, have the turn or talents to get money; but fewer know how to fpend it handfomely after they have got it. The elegance of luxury confifts in variety, and love requires it as much as any of our appetites and paffions, and there is a time of life when a man's appetite ought to be whetted by a delicacy.

Dueat. Nay, Mrs. Trapes, now you are too hard upon me. Sure, you cannot think me such a clown as to be really in love with my Wise! We are not so ignorant here as you imagine; why, I married her in a reasonable way, only for her money.

AIR III. Noel Hills.

Ducat. Damaris, [calling at the door] Damaris, I charge you not to ftir from the door, and the inftant you fee your lady at a diffance returning from her walk, befure to give me notice.

Trapes. She is in most charming rigging; she won't cost you a penny, Sir, in cloaths at first setting out. But, alack-a-day! no bargain could ever thrive with dry lips: a glass of liquor makes every thing go so glibly.

Ducat. Here, Damaris; a glass of Rum for Mrs. Dye. [Damaris goes out and returns with a bottle and glass.]

Trapes. But as I was faying, Sir, I would not part with her to any body alive but your felf; for, to be fure, I could turn her to ten times the profit by jobbs and chance customers. Come, Sir, here's to the young lady's health.

SCENE III.

DUCAT, TRAPES, FLIMZY.

Traper. Well, Flimzy, are all the ladies fafely landed, and have you done as I order'd you?

Flimzy. Yes, Madam. The three ladies for the run of the house are safely lodg'd at home; the other is without in the hall to wait your commands. She is a most delicious creature, that's certain. Such lips, such Flimzy. But I hope, Sir, you won't forget poor Flimzy; for the richest man alive could not be more ferupulous than I am upon these occasions, and the bribe only can make me excuse it to my conscience. I hope, Sir, you will pardon my freedom. [He gives ber money.]

AIR IV. Sweetheart, think upon me.

TRAPES.

Trapes. I wonder I am not more wealthy; for, o' my confcience, I have as few feruples as those that are ten thousand times as rich. But, alack-a-day! I am forc'd to play at fmall game. I now and then betray and ruine an innocent girl. And what of that? Can I in confeience expect to be equally rich with those who betray and ruine provinces and countries? Introth, all their great fortunes are owing to fituation ; as for genius and capacity I can match them to a hair: were they in my circumstance they would act like me; were I in theirs, I should be rewarded as a most profound penetrating politician.

Trapes. Bless my eye-fight! what do I see? I am in a dream, or it is Mifs Pelly Peacham! mercy upon me! Child, what brought you on this fide of the water?

Polly. Love, Madam, and the misfortunes of our family. But I am equally furpris'd to find an acquaintance here; you cannot be ignorant of my unhappy flory, and perhaps from you, Mrs. Dye, I may receive some information that may be useful to me.

Trapes. You need not be much concern'd, Mifs Polly, at a fentence of transportation, for a young lady of your beauty hath wherewithal to make her fortune in any country.

Polly. Pardon me, Madam; you miftake me. Though I was educated among the most profligate in low life, I never engag'd in my father's affairs as a thief or a thief-catcher, for indeed I abhorr'd his profession. Would my Papa had never taken it up, he then still had been alive and I had never known Macheath!

She who hath felt a real pain
By Cupid's dart,
Finds that all absence is in vain
To cure her heart.
Though from my lover cast
Far as from Pole to Pole,
Still the pure slame must last,
For love is in the Soul.

You must have heard, Madam, that I was unhappy in my marriage. When Macheath was transported all my peace was banished with him; and my Papa's death hath now given me liberty to pursue my inclinations.

Trapes. Good lack-a-day! poor Mr. Peachum! Death was fo much oblig'd to him that I wonder he did not allow him a reprieve for his own fake. Truly, I think he was oblig'd to no-body more except the physicians: but they dye it seems too. Death is very impartial; he takes all alike, friends and foes.

Polly. Every monthly Seffions-paper like the apothecary's files A may make the comparison) was a record of his services. But my Papa kept company with gentlemen, and ambition is catching. He was in too much baste to be rich. I wish all great men would take warning. 'Tis now seven months since my Papa was hang'd.

Trapes. This will be a great check indeed to your men of enterprizing genius; and it will be unfafe to push at making a great fortune, if such accidents grow common. But sure, Child, you are not so mad as to think of following Macheath.

Polly. In following him I am in pursuit of my quiet: I love him, and like a troubled ghost shall never be at rest till I appear to him. If I can receive any information of him from you, it will be a cordial to a wretch in despair.

Trapes. My dear Miss Polly, you must not think of it. 'Tis now above a year and a half since he robb'd his master, ran away from the plantation and turn'd pyrate. Then too what puts you beyond all possibility of redress, is, that since he came over he married a transported slave, one Jenny Diver, and she is gone off with him. You must give over all thoughts of him for he is a very devil to our sex; not a woman of the greatest vivacity shifts her inclinations half so fast as he can, Besides, he would disown you, for like an upstart he hates an old acquaintance. I am forry to see those tears, Child, but I love you too well to flatter you.

Polly. Why have I a heart fo conftant? cruel love!

At R VII. O Waly, Waly, up the bank.

Farewell, farewell, all hope of blifs!
For Polly always must be thine.
Shall then my beart be never his,
Which never can again be mine?
O Love, you play a cruel part,
Thy shaft still festers in the wound;
You should reward a constant heart,
Since'tis, alas, so feldom found!

Trapes. I tell you once again, Miss Polly, you must think no more of him. You are like a child who is crying after a butterfly that is hopping and fluttering upon every flower in the field; there is not a woman that comes in his way but he must have a taste of; besides there is no catching him. But, my dear girl, I hope you took care, at your leaving England, to bring off wherewithal to support you.

Polly. Since he is lost, I am insensible of every other missortune. 1

Trapes. Poor child! your father and I have had great dealings together, and I shall be grateful to his memory. I will look upon you as my daughter; you shall be with me.

Polly. As foon as I can have remittances from England, I shall be able to acknowledge your goodness: I have still five hundred pounds there eich will be return'd to me upon demand; but I had rather undertake honest service that might afford me a maintenance than be burthened to my friends.

Trapes. Sure never any thing happen'd fo luckily! Madam Ducat just wants a fervant, and I know she will take my recommendation; and tight and handy as you must please her: then too, her husband is iviled, best-bred man alive. You are now in her house and I won't Polly. The fervice, Madam, you offer me, makes me as happy as I can be in my circumstance, and I accept of it with ten thousand obligations.

Trates. Take a turn in the hall with my maid for a minute or two. and I'll take care to fettle all matters and conditions for your reception. Be affur'd, Miss Polly, I'il do my best for you.

SCENE VI.

TRAPES, DUCAT.

Trapes. Mr. Ducat. Sir. You may come in. I have had this very girl in my eye for you ever fince you and I were first acquainted; and to be plain with you, Sir, I have run great risques for her: I had many a stratagem, to be fure, to inviegle her away from her relations! she too herfelf was exceeding difficult. And I can affure you, to ruine a girl of fevere education is no finall addition to the pleafure of our fine gentlemen. I can be answerable for it too, that you will have the first of her. I am fure I could have dispos'd of her upon the same account for at leaft a hundred guineas to an alderman of London; and then too I might have had the difpofal of her again as foon as fine was out of keeping; but you are my friend, and I shall not deal hard with you. Ducat.

Trapes. But fure you cannot expect to buy a fine handsome christian at that rate. You are not us'd to see such goods on this side of the water. For the women, like the cloaths, are all tarnish'd and half worn out before they are fent hither. Do but cast your eye upon her, Sir; the door

Ducat. Why truly I must own she is handsome.

Trapes. Bless me, you are no more moved by her than if the were your wife. Handfom! what a cold husband-like expression is that! nay, there is no harm done. If I take her home, I don't question the making more money of her. She was never in any body's house but your own fince fhe was landed. She is pure, as she was imported, without the least adulteration.

Ducat. I'll have her. I'll pay you down upon the nail. You shall leave her with me. Come, count your money, Mrs. Dye.

Trapes. What a shape is there! she's of the finest growth.

Ducat. You make me mif-reckon. She even takes off my eyes from gold.

Trapes. What a curious pair of sparkling eyes!

Ducat. As vivifying as the fun. I have paid you ten.

Trapes. What a racy flavour must breath from those lips!

Ducat. I want no provoking commendations. I'm in youth; I'm on fire! twenty more makes it thirty; and this here makes it just fifty.

Trapes. What a most inviting complexion! how charming a colour! In thort, a fine woman has all the perfections of fine wine, and is a cordial that is ten times as reflorative.

SCENE VII.

DUCAT, TRAPES, DAMARIS.

Damaris. Sir, Sir, my Mistress is just at the door. [Exit. Ducat. Get you out of the way this moment, dear Mrs. Dye; for I would not have my wife see you. But don't stir out of the house till I am put in possession. I'll get rid of her immediately. [Exit Trapes.

SCENE VIII.

DUCAT, Mrs. DUCAT.

Mrs. Dreat. I can never be out of the way, for an hour or fo, but you are with that filthy creature. If you were young, and I took liberties, you could not use me worse; you could not, you beastly sellow. Such usage might force the most vertuous woman to resentment. I don't see why the wives in this country should not put themselves upon as easy a foot as in England. In short, Mr. Ducat, if you behave your self like an English husband, I will behave my felf like an English wise.

AIR IX. Red House.

I will have my humours, I'll pleafe all fenfes,
I will not be stinted —— in love or expences.
I'll dress with profusion, I'll game without measure;
You shall have the husiness, I will have the pleasure:
Thus every day I'll pass my life,
My home shall be my least resort;
For sure 'tis sitting that your wife
Shou'd copy ladies of the court.

Ducat. All these things I know are natural to the sex, my dear. But husbands like colts, are restif, and they require a long time to break 'cm. Besides, 'tis not the fashion as yet, for husbands to be govern'd in this country. That tongue of yours, my dear, hath not cloquence enough to perfuade me out of my reason. A woman's tongue, like a trumpet, only serves to raise my courage.

AIR X. Old Orpheus tickl'd, &c.

The rocks are deaf and unfhaken fland:
Old oaks can defy the thunder's roar,
And I can fland woman's tongue—that's more,
With a twinkum, twankum, &c.

With that weapon, women, like pyrates, are at war with the whole world. But I thought, my dear, your pride would have kept you from being jealous. 'Tis the whole bufiness of my life to please you; but wives are like children, the more they are flatter'd and humour'd the more perverse they are. Here now have I been laying out my money, purely to make you a present, and I have nothing but these freaks and reproaches in return. You wanted a maid, and I have bought you the handiest creature; she will indeed make a very creditable fervant.

Mrs. Ducat. I will have none of your huffies about me. And fo, Sir, you would make me your convenience, your bawd. Out upon it!

Ducat. But I bought her on purpose for you, Madam.

Mrs. Ducat. For your own filthy inclinations, you mean. I won't bear it. What keep an impudent strumpet under my nose! Here's fine doings indeed!

Ducat. I will have the directions of my family. 'Tis my pleafure it shall be so. So, Madam, be satisfy'd.

AIR XI. Christ-Church Belis.

When a woman jealous grows, Farewell all peace of life!

Mrs. Ducat. But e'er man roves, be should pay what he owes.

And with her due content his wife. 'Tis man's the weaker sex to sway.

Ducat. 'Tis man's the weaker fex to fway Mrs. Ducat. We too, whene'er we lift, obey.

Ducat. 'Tis just and fit You should submit.

Mrs. Ducat. But fweet kind busband-not to day.

Would I had you in England; I should have all the women there rife in arms in my defence. For the honour and prerogative of the fex, they would not fuller fuch a precedent of fubmiffion. And fo Mr Ducat, I tell you once again, that you shall keep your trollops out of the house, or I will not stay in it.

Ducat. Look'ee, Wife; you will be able to bring about nothing by pouting and vapours. I have refolution enough to withfland either obstinacy or stratagem. And I will break this jealous spirit of yours before it gets a head. And fo, my dear, I order that upon my account you behave your felf to the girl as you ought.

Mrs. Ducat. I wish you would behave your felf to your Wife as you ought; that is to fay, with good manners, and compliance. And fo, Sir, I leave you and your minx together. I tell you once again, that I would fooner dye upon the fpor, than not be miftress in my own house. [Exit in a passion.

SCENE IX. DUCAT, DAMARIS.

Ducat. If by these perverse humours, I should be forc'd to part with her, and allow her a separate maintenance; the thing is so common a. mong people of condition, that it could not prove to my difcredit. Family divisions, and matrimonial controversies are a kind of proof of a man's riches; for the poor people are happy in marriage out of necessity, because they cannot afford to disagree. Damaris. She's wild, Sir. There's no speaking to her. She's flown into the garden! Mercy upon us all, fay I! How can you be fo unreasonable to contradict a woman, when you know we can't bear it?

Ducat. I depend upon you, Damaris, for intelligence. You may observe her at a distance; and as soon as she comes into her own room, bring me word. There is the sweetest pleasure in the revenge that I have now in my head! I'll this instant go and take my charge from Mrs. Trapes. [afide] Damaris, you know your instructions. [Exit.

Damaris. Sure all mafters and miftreffes, like politicians, judge of the conscience of mankind by their own, and require treachery of their fervants as a duty! I am employ'd by my mafter to watch my miftress, and by my miftress to watch my mafter. Which party shall I espouse? To be fure my miftres's. For in hers, jurisdiction and power, the common cause of the whole sex, are at stake. But my master I see is coming this way. I'll avoid him, and make my observations. [Exit.

SCENE XI.

DUCAT, POLLY.

Ducat. Be cheerful, Polly, for your good fortune hath thrown you into a family, where, if you rightly confult your own interest, as every body now-a-days does, you may make your felf perfectly eafy. Those eyes of yours, Polly, are a fufficient fortune for any woman, if she have but conduct and knew how to make the most of 'em.

Polly. As I am your fervant, Sir, my duty obliges me not to contradict you; and I must hear your flattery tho' I know my self undeferving. But fure Sir, in handfome women, you must have observ'd that their hearts often oppose their interest; and beauty certainly has ruin'd more women than it has made happy.

Ducat. I have a mind to have a little conversation with you, and I would not be interrupted. Thurs the door. Polly. I wish, Sir, you would let me receive my Lady's commands.

Ducat. And fo, Polly, by these downcast looks of yours you would have me believe you don't know you are handfome, and that you have no faith in your looking-glass. Why, every pretty woman studies her face, and a looking-glass to her is what a book is to a Pedant; she is poring upon it all day long. In troth, a man can never know how much love is in him by converfations with his Wife. A kifs on those lips would make me young again. [Ki/fes ber.]

AIR XIV. Bury Fair.

Polly. How can you be fo teazing?

Ducat. Nay, huffy, I'll give you money.

Polly. I despise it. No, Sir, tho' I was born and bred in England, I can dare to be poor, which is the only thing now-a-days men are asham'd of.

Ducat. I shall humble these faucy airs of yours, Mrs. Minx. Is this language from a fervant! from a flave!

Polly. Am I then betray'd and fold !

Ducat. Yes, huffy, that you are; and as legally my property, as any woman is her husband's, who fells her felf in marriage.

Polly. Climates that change conftitutions have no effect upon manners. What a profligate is that Trapes!

Ducat. Your fortune, your happiness depends upon your compliance. What, proof against a bribe! Sure, huffy, you belye your country, or you must have had a very vulgar education. 'Tis unnatural.

AIR XV. Bobbing Joan,

But they fall,

Besides, husty, your consent may make me your slave; there's power to tempt you into the bargain. You must be more than woman if you can stand that too.

Polly. Sure you only mean to try me! but 'tis barbarous to trifle with my diffreffes.

Ducat. Ull have none of these airs. 'Tis impertinent in a servant, to have scruples of any kind. I hire honour, conscience and all, for I will not be serv'd by halves. And so, to be plain with you, you obstinate flut, you shall either contribute to my pleasure or my profit; and if you refuse play in the bed-chamber, you shall go work in the fields among the planters. I hope now I have explain'd my felf.

Polly. My freedom may be loft, but you cannot rob me of my vertue and integrity: and whatever is my lot, having that, I shall have the comfort of hope, and find pleasure in reflection.

DUCAT, DAMARIS, Servants, Mrs. DUCAT, &c.

Ducat. What's the matter? Was any body about to ravish you? Is the house o'fire? Or my Wife in a passion?

Damaris. O Sir, the whole country is in an uproar! The pyrates are all coming down upon us; and if they should raise the militia, you are an officer you know. I hope you have time enough to sling up your commission.

[Enter 1st Footman.

tst Footman. The neighbours, Sir, are all frighted out of their wits; they leave their houses, and sly to yours for protection. Where's my Lady, your Wife? Heaven grant, they have not taken her!

Ducat. If they only took what one could spare.

tft Footm. That's true, there were no great harm done.

Ducat. How are the mufquets?

1st Footm. Rufty Sir, all rufty and peaceable! For we never clean 'ensbut against training-day.

Damaris. Then, Sir, your honour is fafe, for now you have a just excuse against fighting.

[Enter 2d Footman.

2d Footman. The Indians, Sir, with whom we are in alliance are all in arms; there will be bloody work to be fure. I hope they will decide the matter before we can get ready. [Enter Mrs. Ducat.

Mrs. Ducat. O dear Husband, I'm frighten'd to death! What will become of us all! I thought a punishment for your wicked lewdness would light upon you at last.

Ducat. Prefence of mind, my dear, is as necessary in dangers as courage.

Damaris. But you are too rich to have courage. You should fight by deputy. 'Tis only for poor people to be brave and desperate, who cannot afford to live.

[Enter Maids, &c. one after another.

1st Maid. The pyrates, Sir, the pyrates! Mercy upon us, what will become of us poor helples women!

2d Maid. We shall all be ravish'd.

1st Old Woman. All be ravish'd!

2d Old Woman. Ay to be fure, we shall be ravish'd; all be ravish'd!

1st Old Wom. But if fortune will have it to, patience is a vertue, and we must undergo it.

But before I go to council-come hither Polly; I intreat you, Wife, to take her into your service. [Enter Polly.] And use her civilly. Indeed, my dear, your fuspicions are very frivolous and unreasonable.

Mrs. Ducat. I hate to have a handfome wench about me. They are always fo faucy !

Ducat. Women, by their jealoufies, put one in mind of doing that which otherwise we should never think of. Why you are a proof, my dear, that a handsome woman may be honest.

Mrs. Ducat. Noifes that did not found very boneft, faid you?

Damaris. Nay, Madam, I am a maid, and have no experience. If you had heard them, you would have been a better judge of the matter.

Mrs. Ducat. An impudent flut! I'll have her before me. If she be not a thorough profligate, I shall make a discovery by her behaviour Go call her to me. [Exit Damaris and returns.

SCENE

SCENE XIV.

Mrs. DUCAT, DAMARIS, POLLY.

Mrs. Ducat. In my own house! Before my face! I'll have you fent to the house of correction, strumpet. By that over-honest look, I guess her to be a horrid jade. A mere hypocrite, that is perfectly whitewash'd with innocence. My blood rises at the fight of all strumpets, for they are simuglers in love, that ruin us fair traders in matrimony. Look upon me, Mrs. brazen. She has no feeling of shame. She is so us'd to impudence, that she has not a blush within her. Do you know, madam, that I am Mr. Ducat's wise?

Polly. As your fervant, Madam, I think my felf happy.

Mrs. Dueat. You know Mr. Dueat, I suppose. She has beauty enough to make any woman alive hate her.

AIR XIX. Trumpet Minuet.

Abroad after miffes most husbands will roam, Tho' sure they find woman sufficient at home. To be nos'd by a strumpet! Hence, hussy you'd hest. Would he give me my due, I wou'd give her the rest.

I vow I had rather have a thief in my house. For to be fure she is that besides.

Polly. If you were acquainted with my misfortunes, Madam, you could not infult me.

Mrs. Ducat. What does the wench mean?

Damaris. There's not one of these common creatures, but, like common beggars, hath a moving story at her singer's ends, which they tell over, when they are maudlin, to their lovers. I had a sweetheart, Madam, who was a rake, and I know their ways very well, by hearsay.

Polly. What villains are hypocrites! For they rob those of relief, who are in real diffress. I know what it is to be unhappy in marriage.

Mrs. Ducat. Married!

Polly. Unhappily.

22

Mrs. Ducat. When, where, to whom?

Polly. If woman can have faith in woman, may my words find belief. Protestations are to be suspected, so I shall use none. If truth can prevail, I know you will pity me.

Mrs. Ducat.

Mrs. Ducat. Her manner and behaviour are fo particular, that is to fay, fo fincere, that I must hear her story. Unhappily married! That is a misfortune not to be remedied.

Polly. A conflant woman hath but one chance to be happy; an inconflant woman, tho' fhe hath no chance to be very happy, can never be very unhappy.

Damaris. Believe me, Mrs. Polly, as to pleasures of all forts, 'tis a much more agreeable way to be inconstant.

AIR XX. Polwart on the Green.

Love now is nought but art,

'Tis who can juggle heft;
To all men feem to give your heart,
But keep it in your breaft.
What gain and pleafure do we find,
Who change whene'er we lift!
The mill that turns with every wind
Must bring the owner grift.

Polly. My case, Madam, may in these times be look'd upon as singular; for I married a man only because I lov'd him. For this I was look'd upon as a fool by all my acquaintance; I was us'd inhumanly by my father and mother; and to compleat, my misfortunes, my husband, by his wild behaviour, incurr'd the sentence of the law, and was separated from me by bunishment. Being inform'd he was in this country, upon the death of my father and mother, with most of my small for tune, I came here to seek him.

Mrs. Ducat. But how then fell you into the hands of that confirmmate bawd, Trapes?

Polly. In my voyage, Madam, I was robb'd of all I had. Upon my landing in a flrange country, and in want, I was found out by this in human woman, who had been an acquaintance of my father's: She offer'd me at first the civilities of her own house. When she was inform'd of my necessities, she propos'd to me the service of a Lady; of which I readily accepted. 'Twas under that pretence that she treacherously fold me to your husband as a mistress. This, Madam, is in short the whole truth. I shing my felf at your feet for protection. By relieving me, you make your felf easy.

Mrs. Ducat.

Mrs. Ducat. What is't you propose?

Polly. In conniving at my escape, you save me from your husband's worrying me with threats and violence, and at the same time quiet your own scars and jealousies. If it is ever in my power, Madam, with gratitude I will repay you my ransom.

Danaris. Befides, Madam, you will effectually revenge your felf upon your husband; for the lofs of the money he paid for her will touch him to the quick.

Mrs. Ducat. But have you confider'd what you request? We are invaded by the pyrates: The Indians are in arms; the whole country is in commotion, and you will every where be exposed to danger.

Damaris. Get rid of her at any rate. For fuch is the vanity of man, that when once he has begun with a woman, out of pride he will infift upon his point.

Polly. In staying with you, Madam, I make two people unhappy. And I chuse to bear my own misfortunes, without being the cause of another's.

Mrs. Ducat. If I let her escape before my husband's return, he will imagine she got off by the favour of this bustle and confusion.

Polly. May heaven reward your charity.

Mrs. Ducat. A woman fo young and fo handsome must be expos'd to continual dangers. I have a fuit of cloaths by me of my nephew's, who is dead. In a man's habit you will run fewer risques. I'll affist you too for the present with some money; and, as a traveller, you may with greater safety make enquiries after your husband.

Polly. How shall I ever make a return for so much goodness?

Mrs. Ducat. May love reward your constancy. As for that perfidious monster Trapes, I will deliver her into the hands of the magistrate. Come, Damaris, let us this instant equip her for her adventures.

Damaris. When she is out of the house, without doubt, Madam, you will be more easy. And I wish she may be so too.

Polly. May vertue be my protection; for I feel within me hope, cheerfulness, and resolution.

The View of an INDIAN Country.

POLLY in Boy's Cloatbs.

AIR XXII. La Villanella.

WHY did you spare him,
O'er seas to bear him,
Far from his home, and constant bride?
When Papa 'peach'd him,
If death had reach'd him,
I then had only sigh'd, wept, and dy'd!

If my directions are right, I cannot be far from the village. With the habit, I must put on the courage and resolution of a man; for I am every where surrounded with dangers. By all I can learn of these pyrates, my dear Macheath is not of the crew. Perhaps I may hear of him among the slaves of the next plantation. How sultry is the day! the cool of this shade will refresh me. I am jaded too with reslection. How restless is love! CAPSTERN, HACKER, CULVERIN, LAGUERRE, CUTLACE. Polly assespin a distant part of the stage.

Hacker. We shall find but a cool reception from Morano, if we return without either booty or intelligence.

Culverin. A man of invention hath always intelligence ready. I hope we are not exempted from the privilege of travellers.

Capftern. If we had got booty, you know we had refolv'd to agree in a lye. And, gentlemen, we will not have our diligence and duty call'd in question for that which every common servant has at his singers end for his justification.

Laguerre. Alack, gentlemen, we are not fuch bunglers in love or politicks, but we must know that either to get favour or keep it, no man ever speaks what he thinks, but what is convenient.

AIR XXIV. Three Sheep-skins.

Cutlace. Of all the fins that are money-fiepplying;
Confider the world, 'tis past all denying,
With all forts,
In towns or courts,
The richest sin is lying.

Culverin. Fatigue, gentlemen, should have refreshment. No man is requir'd to do more than his duty. Let us repose our selves a-while. A sup or two of our cag would quicken invention. [They fit and drink-All. Agreed.

Hacker. I had always a genius for ambition. Birth and education cannot keep it under. Our profession is great, brothers. What can be more beroic than to have declar'd war with the whole world?

Act II.

Culverin. 'Tis a pleasure to me to recollect times past, and to observe by what steps a genius will push his fortune.

Hacker. Now as to me, brothers, mark you me. After I had rubb'd through my youth with variety of adventures, I was prefer'd to be footman to an eminent gamefter, where, after having improv'd my felf by his manners and conversation, I left him, betook my self to his politer profession, and cheated like a gentleman. For some time I kept a Pharaon-Bank with fuccefs, but unluckily in a drunken bout was flript by a more expert brother of the trade. I was now, as 'tis common with us upon these occasions, forc'd to have recourse to the highway for a recruit to fet me up; but making the experiment once too often, I was try'd, and receiv'd fentence; but got off for transportation. Which hath made me the man I am.

Laguerre. From a footman I grew to be a pimp to a man of quality. Confidering I was for fometime in that employment, I look upon my felf as particularly unlucky, that I then miss'd making my fortune. But, to give him his due, only his death could have prevented it. Upon this, I betook my felf to another fervice, where my wages not being fufficient for my pleasures, I robb'd my master, and retir'd to visit foreign parts.

Capflern. Now, you must know, I was a drawer of one of the fashionable taverns, and of confequence was daily in the politest conversations. Tho' I fay it, no body was better bred. I often cheated my mafter, and as a dutiful fervant, now and then cheated for him. I had always my gallantries with the ladies that the lords and gentlemen brought to our house. I was ambitious too of a gentleman's profession, and turn'd gamester. Tho' I had great skill and no scruples, my play would not support my extravagancies: So that now and then I was forc'd to rob with piftols too. So I also owe my rank in the world to transportation.

Gulverin. Our chief, Morano, brothers, had never been the man he is, had he not been train'd up in England. He has told me, that from his infancy he was the favourite page of a lady. He had a genius too above fervice, and, like us, ran into higher life. And, indeed, in manners and convertation, tho' he is black, no body has more the air of a great man.

White Express of Academs

Hacker. He is too much attach'd to his pleasures. That mistress of his is a clog to his ambition. She's an arrant Cleopatra.

Laguerre.

Laguerre. If it were not for her, the Indies would be our own.

AIR XXV. Rigadoon,

By women won, We're all undone, Each wench bath a Syren's charms. The lover's deeds Are good or ill. As robim fucceeds In woman's will : Resolution is sull'd in her arms.

Hacker. A man in love is no more to be depended on than a man in liquor, for he is out of himself.

AIR XXVI. Ton humeur off Catharine.

Woman's like the flatt'ring ocean, Who ber pathlefs ways can find? Every blast directs ber motion Now she's angry, now she's kind. What a fool's the vent'rous lover, Whirl'd and tofs'd by overy wind! Can the bark the port recover When the filly Pilot's blind?

Hacker. A good horse is never turn'd loose among marcs, till all his good deeds are over. And really your heroes should be serv'd the same way; for after they take to women, they have no good deeds to come. That inviegling gipfey, brothers, must be hawl'd from him by force. And then-the kingdom of Mexico shall be mine. My lot shall be the kingdom of Mexico.

Capplern. Who talks of Mexico? [all rife] I'll never give it up. If you outlive me, brother, and I dye without heirs, Pll leave it to you for a legacy. I hope now you are fatisfy'd. I have fet my heart upon it, and no body shall dispute it with me.

Laguerre. The island of Cuba, methinks, brother, might fatisfy any realonable man.

Culverin. That I had allotted for you. Mexico shall not be parted with without my content, captain Morano to be fure will choose Peru; that's the country of gold, and all your great men love gold. Mexico hath only filver, nothing but filver. Governor of Cartagena, brother, is a pretty finug employment. That I shall not dispute with you.

Capflern. Death, Sir, -I shall not part with Mexico fo casily.

Hacker, Nor I.

Culveria, Nor I.

Laguerre. Nor I.

Culverin. Nor I.

Hacker. Draw then, and let the furvivor take it. Tibey fight. Polly. Bless me, what noise was that! Clashing of fwords and fighting! Which way shall I fly, how shall I escape?

Capftern. Hold, hold, gentlemen, let us decide our pretenfions fome other time. I see booty. A prisoner. Let us seize him.

Culverin. From him we will extort both ranfom and intelligence.

Polly. Spare my life gentlemen. If you are the men I take you for, I fought you to fhare your fortunes.

Hacker, Why, who do you take us for, friend?

Polly. For those brave spirits, those Alexanders, that shall soon by conquest be in possession of the Indies.

Laguerre. A mettl'd young fellow.

Capftern. He speaks with respect too, and gives us our titles.

Culverin. Have you heard of captain Morano?

Polly. I came hither in meer ambition to ferve under him.

AIR XXVII. Ye nymphs and fylvan gods.

I would willingly choose the more honourable way of making a fortune. Hacker.

Hacker. The youth speaks well. Can you inform us, my lad, of the disposition of the enemy? Have the Indians joyn'd the factory? We should advance towards 'em immediately. Who knows but they may fide with us? May-hap they may like our tyranny better.

Polly. I am a stranger, gentlemen, and entirely ignorant of the affairs of this country: But in the most desperate undertaking, I am ready to rifque your fortunes.

Act II.

Hacker. Who, and what are you, friend !

Polly. A young fellow, who has genteely run out his fortune with a fpirit, and would now with more fpirit retrieve it.

Culverin. The lad may be of fervice. Let us bring him before Ma

Polly. Gentlemen, I thank you,

Culverin. Cheer up my lads, let us puffs on the fray, For battles, like women, are loft by delay. Let us feize viftory while in our power; Alike war and love bave their critical bour. Our bearts bold and steady Should always be ready, So, think war a widow, a kingdom the dower, [Excunt.

Another Country Prospect. MORANO, JENNY.

Morano. Sure, huffy, you have more ambition and more vanity than to be serious in persuading me to quit my conquests. Where is the waman who is not fond of title? And one bold step more, may make you 2 queen, you gipfy. Think of that.

AIR XXX. Sawny was tall, and of noble race.

Shall I not be bold when bonour calls? You've a heart that would upbraid me then.

Morano. To deck their wives fond tradefinen cheat ; I conquer but to make thee great.

Jenny. But if my bero falls, - ab then Thy Jenny fall ne'er know pleasure again!

Morano. Infinuating creature! but you must own Jenny, you have had convincing proofs of my fondness; and if you were reasonable in your love, you should have some regard to my honour, as well as my person. Jenny. Have I ever betray'd you, fince you took me to your fels? That's what few women can fay, who ever were trufted.

Morano. In love, Jenny, you cannot out-do me. Was it not entirely for you that I difguis'd my felf as a black, to skreen my felf from women who laid claim to me where-ever I went? Is not the rumour of my death, which I purposely spread, credited thro' the whole country? Macheath is dead to all the world but you. Not one of the crew have the least suspicion of me.

Jenny. But, dear captain, you would not fure perfuade me that I have all of you. For the' women cannot claim you, you now and then lay claim to other women. But my jealoufy was never teazing or vexatious. You will pardon me, my dear.

Morano. Now you are filly, Jenny. Pr'ythee-poh! Nature girl is not to be corrected at once. What do you propose? What would you have me do? Speak out, let me know your mind.

Morano. Your opinion of me startles me. For I never in my life was treacherous but to women; and you know men of the nicest punotilio make nothing of that.

Jenny. Look round among all the fnug fortunes that are made, and you will find most of 'em were secur'd by a judicious retreat. Why will you bar your felf from the customs of the times?

Sailor. Sir, Lieutenant Vanderbluff wants to speak with you. And he hopes your honour will give him the hearing. Morano. Leave me, Jenny, for a few minutes. Perhaps he would fpeak with me in private.

Jenny. Think of my advice before it is too late. By this kifs I beg it of you.

SCENE IV.

MORANO, VANDERBLUFF.

Vanderbluff. For shame, Captain; what, hamper'd in the arms of a woman, when your honour and glory are all at stake! while a man is grappling with these gil-slirts, pardon the expression, Captain, he runs his reason a-ground; and there must be a woundy deal of labour to fet it a-float again.

POLLY:

Fine women are devils, compleat in their way, They always are roving and cruifing for prey. When we flounce on their book, their views they obtain, Like those too their pleasure is giving us pain.

Excuse my plain speaking, Captain; a boatswain must swear in a storm, and a man must speak plain, when he sees foul weather a-head of us.

Morano. D'you think me like the wheat-ear, only fit for funfhine, who cannot bear the leaft cloud over him? No Vanderbluff, I have a heart that can face a tempest of dangers. Your bluft'ring will but make me obstinate. You feem frighten'd, Lieutenant.

Vanderbluff. From any body but you, that speech should have had another-guess answer than words. Death, Captain, are not the Indies in difpute? an hour's delay may make their hands too many for us. Give the word, Captain, this hand shall take the Indian King pris'ner, and keel-hawl him afterwards, 'till I make him discover his gold. I have known you eager to venture your life for a lefs prize.

Vanderbluff. To our woman, you mean. Furies! you talk like one. If our Captain is bewitch'd, shall we be be-devil'd, and lose the footing we have got?

Morano. Take care, Lieutenant. This language may provoke me. I fear no man. I fear nothing, and that you know. Put up your cutlace, Lieutenant, for I shall not ruin our cause by a private quarrel.

Vanderbluff. Noble Captain, I ask pardon.

Morano. A brave man should be cool till action, Lieutenant; when danger prefies us, I am always ready. Be fatisfy'd, I'll take my leave of my wife, and then take the command. .

Vanderbluff. That's what you can never do till you have her leave. She is but just gone from you, Sir. See her not; hear her not; the breath of a woman has ever prov'd a contrary wind to great actions.

Hacker. We found him upon the road. He is a ftranger it feems in these parts. And as our heroes generally set out, extravagance, gaming and debauchery have qualify'd him for a brave man.

Morano. What are you, friend?

Polly. A young fellow, who hath been robb'd by the world; and I came on purpose to join you, to rob the world by way of retaliation. An open war with the whole world is brave and honourable. I hate the clandestine pilfering war that is practis'd among friends and neighbours in civil societies. I would serve, Sir.

Morano. When every thing is fettled, my dear Jemy, I will return to take my leave. After that, young gentleman, I shall try your mettle. In the mean time, Jenny, I leave you to fift him with farther questions. He has liv'd in the world, you find, and may have learnt to be treacherous.

SCENE VI.

TENNY, POLLY:

Jenny. How many women have you ever ruin'd, young gentleman! Polly. I have been ruin'd by women, madam. But I think indeed a man's fortune cannot be more honourably dispos'd of; for those have always a kind of claim to their protection, who have been ruin'd in their service.

Jenny. Were you ever in love?

Polly. With the fex.

Jenny. Had you never a woman in love with you?"

Polly. All the women that ever I knew were mercenary.

Jenny. But fure you cannot think all women fo.

Polly. Why not as well as all men? The manners of courts are catching.

Jenny. If you have found only fuch usage, a generous woman can the more oblige you. Why so bashful, young spark? You don't look as if you would revenge your self on the sex.

Polly. I lost my impudence with my fortune. Poverty keeps down sturance.

Jenny. I am a plain-spoken woman, as you may find, and I own I like you. And, let me tell you, to be my favourite may be your best step to preferment.

Jenny. What mean we then by being try'd?

Polly. With feorn and flight to use us. Most beauties, to indulge their pride, Seem kind but to refuse us.

Jenny. Come then, my dear, let us take a turn in yonder grove. A woman never shews her pride but before witnesses.

Polly. How shall I get rid of this affair? [Afide.] Morano may furprize us.

Morano. What-a-vengeance is the matter?

Jenny. Only an attempt upon your wife. So ripe an affurance! he must have suck'd in impudence from his mother.

MORANO, JENNY, POLLY, VANDERBLUFF, CAPSTERN, LAGUERRE, &c. with CAWWAW-KEE Prifener.

Van. The party, captain, is return'd with success. After a short skirmish, the Indian prince Cawwawkee here was made prisoner, and we want your orders for his disposal.

Mor. Are all our troops ready and under arms?

Van. They wait but for your command. Our numbers are flrong. All the ships crews are drawn out, and the slaves that have deserted to us from the plantations are all brave determin'd fellows, who must behave themselves well.

Mor. Look'e lieutenant, the truffing up this prince, in my opinion, would ftrike a terror among the enemy. Befides, dead men can do no mifchief. Let a gibbet be fet up, and fwing him off between the armies before the onfet.

Van. By your leave, captain, my advice blows directly contrary. Whatever may be done hereafter, I am for putting him first of all upon examination. The Indians to be fure have hid their treasures, and we shall want a guide to shew us the best plunder.

Mor. The counsel is good. I will extort intelligence from him. Bring me word when the enemy are in motion, and that instant Pil put myself at your head. [Exit Sailor.] Do you know me, prince?

Caw. As a man of injustice I know you, who covets and invades the properties of another.

MORANO, JENNY, VANDERBLUFF,

Van. Come, noble captain, take one hearty finack upon her lips, and then freer off; for one kils requires another, and you will never have done with her. If once a man and woman come to grappling, there's no hawling of 'em afunder. Our friends expect us.

Jen. Nay, lieutenant Vanderbluff, he shall not go yet.

Van. I'm out of all patience. There is a time for all things, Madam. But a woman thinks all times must be subservient to her whim and humour. We should be now upon the spot.

Jon. Is the captain under your command, lieutenant?

Van. I know women better than fo. I shall never dispute the command with any gentleman's wife. Come captain, a woman will never take the last kifs; she will always want another. Break from her clutches.

Mor. I must go --- But L.cannot.

AIR XLIII. Excuse me.

Honour calls me from thy arms, [to him. With glory my Boson is beating.
Victory summons to arms: then to arms
Let us haste, for we're sure of defeating.
One look more— and then—
Ob, I am lost again!
What a Power has beauty!
But honour calls, and I must away.
But love forbids, and I must obey.
You grow too hold; [Vanderblust pulling him away.

Hence, loofe your hold,
For love claims all my duty.

They will bring us word when the enemy is in motion. I know my own time, lieutenant.

Van. Lose the Indies then, with all my heart. Lose the money, and you lose the woman, that I can tell you, captain. Furies, what would the woman be at!

Jen. Not so hasty and choleric, I beg you, lieutenant. Give me the hearing, and perhaps, whatever you may think of us, you may once in your life hear a woman speak reason.

Van. Difpatch then. And if a few words can fatisfy you, be brief. Jen. Men only flight womens advice thro' an over-conceit of their own opinions. I am against hazarding a battle. Why should we put what we have already got to the risque? We have money enough on Van. Sure you are the first of the fex that ever stinted herself in love or money. If it were consistent with our honour, her counsel were worth listening to.

Jen. Confistent with our honour! For shame, lieutenant; you talk downright Indian. One would take you for the savage's brother or cousin-german at least. You may talk of honour, as other great men do: But when interest comes in your way, you should do as other great men do.

Air XLIV. Ruben.

Honour plays a bubble's part,
Ever bilk'd and cheated;
Never in ambition's heart,
Int'rest there is seated.
Honour was in use of yore,
Tho' by want attended:
Since 'twas talk'd of, and no more;
Lord, how times are mended!

Van. What think you of her propofal, noble captain? We may push matters too far.

Jen. Confider, my dear, the Indies are only treasures in expectation. All your fensible men, now a days, love the ready. Let us seize the ships then, and away for England, while we have the opportunity.

Van. Sure you can have no fcruple against treachery, captain. 'Tis as common a money-getting vice as any in fashion; for who now-a days ever boggles at giving up his crew?

Mor. I'll be with 'em. Come then, lieutenant, for death or the world.

Jen. Nay then, if affairs are desperate, nothing shall part me from you. I'll share your dangers.

Mor. Since I must have an empire, prepare yourself, Jenny, for the cares of royalty. Let us on to battle, to victory. Hark the trumpet.

SCENE XI. A room of a poor cottage. CAWIVAWKEE in chains, POLLY.

Pol. Unfortunate prince! I cannot blame your difbelief, when I tell you that I admire your virtues, and share in your misfortunes.

Caw. To be oppress'd by an European implies merit. Yet you are an European. Are you fools? Do you believe one another? Sure fpeech can be of no use among you.

Pol. There are conflictutions that can refift a pestilence.

Cave. But fure vice must be inherent in such constitutions. You are asham'd of your hearts, you can lie. How can you bear to look into yourselves?

Pol. My fincerity could even bear your examination.

Care. You have cancell'd faith. How can I believe you? You are cowards too, for you are cruel.

Pol. Would it were in my power to give you proofs of my compaffion.

Caro. You can be avaritious. That is a complication of all vices. It comprehends them all. Heaven guard our country from the infection.

Pol. Yet the worst men allow virtue to be amiable, or there would be no hypocrites.

Caw. Have you then hypocrify flill among you? For all that I have experienc'd of your manners is open violence, and barefac'd injuffice. Who that had ever felt the fatisfaction of virtue would ever part with it?

Virtue's treasure Is a pleasure, Cheerful even amid diffress ; Nor pain nor croffes, Nor grief nor loffes, Nor death itself can make it less: Here relying, Suff ring, dying, Honest fouls find all redress.

Caw. Having this, I want no other confolation. I am prepar'd for all misfortune.

. Pol. Had you means of escape, you could not refuse it. To preferve your life is your duty,

Caw. By dishonest means, I fcorn it.

Pol. But stratagem is allow'd in war; and 'tis lawful to use all the weapons employ'd against you. You may save your friends from affliction, and be the inftrument of refcuing your country.

Caw. Those are powerful inducements. I seek not voluntarily to refign my life. While it lafts, I would do my duty.

Pol. I'll talk with our guard. What induces them to rapin and murther, will induce 'em to betray. You may offer them what they want; and from no hands, upon no terms, corruption can refift the temptation.

Caw. I have no skill. Those who are corrupt themselves know how to corrupt others. You may do as you pleafe. But whatever you promife for me, contrary to the European custom, I will perform. For tho' a knave may break his word with a knave, an honest congue knows no fuch diffinctions.

Pol. Know you the treasures that are in his power?

Lag. I know too that they shall soon be ours.

Pol. In having him in your possession they are yours.

Lag. As how, friend?

Pol. He might well reward you.

Lag. For what?

Pol. For his liberty.

Caw. Yes, European, I can and will reward you.

Cap. He's a great man, and I trust no such promises.

Caw. I have faid it, European: And an Indian's heart is always answerable for his words.

Pol. Think of the chance of war, gentlemen. Conquest is not so fure when you fight against those who fight for their liberties.

Lag. What think you of the propofal?

Cap. The prince can give us places; he can make us all great men. Such a prospect I can tell you, Laguerre, would tempt our betters. Lag. Besides, if we are beaten, we have no retreat to our ships.

Cap. If we gain our ends what matter how we come by it?

Lag. Every man for himself, say I. There is no being even with mankind, without that universal maxim. Consider, brother, we run no risque.

Cap. Nay, I have no objections.

Add a down as a careful to a top of the comment of Lag. If we conquer'd, and the booty were to be divided among the crews, what would it amount to? Perhaps this way we might get more than would come to our shares.

Cap. Then too, I always lik'd a place at court. I have a genius to get, keep in, and make the most of an employment.

Lag. You will confider, prince, our own politicians would have rewarded fuch meritorious fervices: We'll go off with you.

Cap. We want only to be known to be employ'd.

Thus the woodcock, the partridge, the pheasant is slain.
What care and expence for their hounds are employ'd!
Thus the fox, and the hare, and the stag are destroy'd.
The spaniel they cherish, whose slattering way
Can as well as their masters cringe, sawn and betray.
Thus stanch politicians, look all the world round,
Love the men who can serve as hawk, spaniel or hound. [Excunt.

Pob. Sure, you have not fear. Are you a man?

Duc. A married man, Sir, who carries his wife's heart about him, and that indeed is a little timorous. Upon promife to her, I am engag'd to quit in case of a battle; and her heart hath ever govern'd me more than my own. Besides, Sir, sighting is not our business; we pay others for fighting; and yet 'tis well known we had rather part with our lives than our money.

Pob. And have you no spirit then to defend it? Your families, your liberties, your properties are at stake. If these cannot move you, you must be born without a heart.

Duc. Why should I have any more scruples about myself, than about my money? If I can make my courage pass current, what matter is it to me whether it be true or false? 'Tis time enough to own a man's failings when they are found out. If your majefly then will not dispense with my duty to my wife, with permission, I'll to my post. Pob. Let justice then take her courfe, I shall not interfere with her decrees. Mercy too obliges me to protect my country from fuch violences. Immediate death shall put a stop to your further mifchiefs.

Mor. This fentence indeed is hard. Without the common forms of trial! Not so much as the counsel of a newgate attorney! Not to be able to lay out my money in partiality and evidence! Not a friend perjur'd for me! This is hard, very hard.

Pob. Let the fentence be put in execution. Lead him to death. Let his accomplices be witnesses of it, and afterwards let them be fecurely guarded till farther orders.

AIR LXI. Mad Moll.

Mor. All crimes are judg'd like fornication; While rich we are bonest no doubt. Fine ladies can keep reputation, Poor laffes alone are found out. If juffice bad piercing eyes, Like ourselves to look within,

She'd find power and wealth a difguife That Shelter the worst of our kin.

A& III.

Exit guarded.

SCENE XII.

POHETOHEE, CAWWAWKEE, POLLY.

Pob. How shall I return the obligations I owe you? Every thing in my power you may command. In making a requeft, you confer on me another benefit. For gratitude is oblig'd by occasions of making a return: And every occasion must be agreeable, for a grateful mind hath more pleafure in paying than receiving.

Case. My friendship too is impatient to give you proofs of it. How happy would you make me in allowing me to discharge that duty!

AIR LXII. Prince George.

All friendship is a mutual debt,

The contract's inclination:

Caw. We never can that bond forget

Of fiveet retaliation.

Pol. All day, and every day the fame

We are paying and still owing;

Caw. By turns we grant by turns we claim The pleasure of bestowing.

Both. By turns we grant, &c.

Pol. The pleafure of having ferv'd an honourable man is a fufficient return. My misfortunes, I fear, are beyond relief.

Caw. That figh makes me fuffer. If you have a want let me know it. Peb. If it is in a king's power, my power will make me happy.

Caso. If you believe me a friend, you are unjust in concealing your diftreffes from me. You deny me the privilege of friendship; for I have a right to share them, or redress them.

Pob. Can my treasures make you happy?

Pol. Those who have them not think they can; those who have them know they cannot.

Pob. How unlike his countrymen!

Care. While you conceal one want from me, I feel every want for you. Such obstinacy to a friend is barbarity.

Pol.

She'd

Pol. Let not my reflection interrupt the joys of your triumph. Could I have commanded my thoughts, I would have referv'd them for folitude.

Caw. Those fighs and that reservedness are symptoms of a heart in love. A pain that I am yet a stranger to.

Pol. Then you have never been compleatly wretched.

AIR LXIII. Blithe Jockey young and gay.

Can words the pain express
Which absent lovers know?
He only mine can guess
Whose heart bath felt the woe.
'Tis doubt, suspicion, sear,
Seldom hope, oft' despair;
'Tis jealousy, 'tis rage, in briess
'Tis every pang and gries.

Caw. But does not love often deny itself aid and comfort, by being too obstinately secret?

Pol. One cannot be too open to generofity; that is a fun, of univerfal benignity. In concealing ourfelves from it we but deny ourfelves the bleffings of its influence.

AIR LXIV. In the fields in frost and snow.

The modest lilly, like the maid,
Its pure bloom defending,
Is of noxious dews afraid,
Soon as even's descending.
Clos'd all night,
Free from blight,
It preserves the native subita
But at morn unfolds its leaves,
And the vital sur receives.

Yet why should I trouble your majesty with the missortunes of so inconsiderable a wretch as I am?

Pob. A king's beneficence should be like the fun. The most humble weed should feel its influence as well as the most gaudy slower. But I have the nearest concern in any thing that touches you.

Pol.

A& III. An OPERA.

67

Pol. You see then at your feet the most unhappy of women. [kneels, he raifes her.

Caw. A woman! Oh my heart!

Poh. A woman!

Pol. Yes, Sir, the most wretched of her fex. In love! married!

Pob. What brought you into these countries?

Pol. To find my husband. Why had not the love of virtue directed my heart? But, alas, 'tis outward appearance alone that generally engages a woman's affections! And my heart is in the possession of the most profligate of mankind.

Pob. Why this difguise?

Pol. To protect me from the violences and infults to which my fex might have expos'd me.

Case. Had the not been married, I might have been happy. [Afide. Pol. He ran into the madness of every vice. I detest his principles, tho' I am fond of his person to distraction. Could your commands for search and enquiry restore him to me, you reward me at once with all my wishes. For sure my love still might reclaim him.

Caso. Had you conceal'd your fex, I had been happy in your friendfhip; but now, how uneasy, how reftless is my heart!

AIR LXV. Whilft I gaze on Chloc.

Whilft I gaze in fond defiring,
Every former thought is loft.
Sighing, wishing and admiring,
How my troubled foul is toft!
Hot and cold my blood is flowing,
How it thrills in every vein!
Liberty and life are going,
Hote can never relieve my tain.

Enter Indian.

Ind. The reft of the troops, Sir, are return'd from the pursuit with more prisoners. They attend your majesty's commands.

Pob. Let them be brought before us. [Ex. Ind.] Give not yourfelf up to defpair; for every thing in my power you may command.

[To Pol.

K 2

Caw. And every thing in mine. But, alas, I have none; for I am not in my own!

SCENE XIII.

POHETOHEE, CAWWAWKEE, POLLY, DUCAT, JENNY guarded, &c.

Yen. Spare my hufband, Morano is my hufband.

Pob. Then I have reliev'd you from the fociety of a monfler.

Jen. Alas, Sir, there are many hutbands who are furious monflers to the rest of mankind, that are the tamest creatures alive to their wives. I can be answerable for his duty and submission to your majesty, for I know I have so much power over him, that I can even make him good.

Pob. Why then had you not made him fo before?

Jen. I was, indeed, like other wives, too indulgent to him, and as it was agreeable to my own humour, I was loth to baulk his ambition. I must, indeed, own too that I had the frailty of pride. But where is the woman who hath not an inclination to be as great and rich as she can be?

Pob. With how much ease and unconcern these Europeans talk of vices, as if they were necessary qualifications.

AIR LXVI. The Jamaica.

The fex, we find, Like men inclin'd To guard against reproaches; And none neglett To pay refpett

To rogues subo keep their coaches.

Indeed, Sir, I had determin'd to be honest myfelf, and to have made him fo too, as foon as I had put myfelf upon a reafonable foot in the world; and that is more felf-denial than is commonly practis'd.

Pub. Woman, your profligate fentiments offend me; and you deferve to be cut off from fociety; with your hufband. Mercy would be scarce excusable in pardoning you. Have done then. Merano is now under the flroke of juffice. Yen.

Jen. Let me implore your majesty to respite his sentence. Send me back again with him into flavery, from whence we efcap'd. Give us an occasion of being honest, for we owe our lives and liberties to another.

Duc. Yes, Sir, I find fome of my run-away flaves among the crew; and I hope my fervices at least will allow me to claim my own again.

Jon. Morano, Sir, I must confess hath been a free liver, and a man of fo many gallantries, that no woman could escape him. If Macbeath's misfortunes were known, the whole fex would be in tears.

Pol. Macheath!

Jen. He is no black, Sir, but under that difguife, for my fake, fkreen'd himself from the claims and importunities of other women May love intercede for him?

Pol. Macbeath! Is it possible? Spare him, fave him, I ask no other reward.

Pob. Hafte, let the fentence be suspended.

Ex. Ind.

Pol. Fly; a moment may make me miferable. Why could not I know him? All his diffreffes brought upon him by my hand! Cruel. love, how could'ft thou blind me fo?

AIR LXVII. Tweed Side.

The stag, when chas'd all the long day O'er the lawn, thro' the forest and brake; New panting for breath and at bay, Novo stemming the river or lake; When the treacherous fcent is all cold, And at eve be veturns to bis bind, Can ber joy, can ber pleasure be told? Such joy and fuch pleasure I find.

But, alas, now again reflection turns fear upon my heart. His pardon may come too late, and I may never fee him more.

Pob. Take hence that profligate woman. Let her be kept under firict guard till my commands.

Jen. Slavery, Sir, flavery is all I ask. Whatever becomes of him, spare my life; spare an unfortunate woman. What can be the meaning of this fudden turn! Confider, Sir, if a hufband be never fo bad, a wife is bound to duty.

Pob. Take her hence, I fay; let my orders be obey'd. [Ex. Jenny guarded.

SCENE

SCENE XIV.

POHETOHEE, CANINAWKEE, POLLY, DUCAT, &c.

Pol. What, no news yet? Not yet return'd!

Caw. If justice hath overtaken him, he was unworthy of you.

Pol. Not yet! Oh how I fear.

Atra LXVIII. One Evening as I lay.

My Heart forebodes he's dead,
That thought how can I hear?
He's gone, for ever fled,
My foul is all defpair!
I fee him pale and cold,
The noofe hath flop'd his breath,
Juft as my dream foretold,
Oh had that fleep been death!

SCENE XV.

POHETOHEE, CAWWAWKEE, POLLY, DUCAT, INDIANS.

Enter Indians.

Pol. He's dead, he's dead! Their looks confess it. Your tongues have no need to give it utterance to confirm my misfortunes! I know, I see, I seel it! Support me! O Macheath!

Duc. Mercy upon me! Now I look upon her nearer, bless me, it must be Polly. This woman, Sir, is my slave, and I claim her as my own. I hope, if your majesty thinks of keeping her, you will reimburse me, and not let me be a loser. She was an honest girl to be sure, and had too much virtue to thrive, for, to my knowledge, money could not tempt her.

Pob. And if flie is virtuous, European, dost thou think I'll act the infamous part of a ruffian, and force her? 'Tis my duty as a king to cherish and protect virtue.

A& III. An OPERA.

Caw. Justice hath reliev'd you from the society of a wicked man. If an honest heart can recompence your loss, you would make me happy in accepting mine. I hope my father will consent to my happiness.

Pab. Since your love of her is founded upon the love of virtue and gratitude, I leave you to your own difpofal.

Caw. What, no reply?

Pol. Abandon me to my forrows. For in indulging them is my on-

Pob. Let the chiefs have immediate execution. For the rest, let 'em be restor'd to their owners, and return to their slavery.

AIR XLIX. Buff-coat.

Caw. Why that languish!

Pol. Ob be's dead! O be's loft for ever!

Caw. Ceafe your anguish, and forget your grief.

Pol. Ab, never!

What air, grace and flature!

Caw. How false in his nature!

Pol. To virtue my love might have won him.

Caw. How base and deceiving!

Pol. But love is believing.

Caw. Vice, at length, as 'tis meet, bath undone bim.

By your confent you might at the fame time give me happiness, and procure your own. My titles, my treasures, are all at your command.

AIR LXX. An Italian Ballad.

Pol. Frail is ambition, how weak the foundation!
Riches have wings as inconfiant as wind;
My heart is proof against either temptation,
Virtue, without them, contentment can find.

I am charm'd, Prince, with your generofity and virtues. 'Tis only by the pursuit of those we secure real happiness. Those that know and seel virtue in themselves, must love it in others. Allow me to give a decent time to my forrows. But my missortunes at present interrupt the joys of victory.

Care. Fair princess, for so I hope shortly to make you, permit me to attend you, either to divide your griefs, or, by conversation, to soften your forrows.

Pob.

71

Pob. 'Tis a pleafure to me by this alliance to recompence your merits. [Ex. Caw. and Pol.] Let the sports and dances then celebrate our victory. [Exit.

DANCE.

At R LXXI. The temple.

I Ind. Justice long forbearing,

Power or riches never fearing,

Slow, yet persevering,

Hunts the villain's face.

Chor. Justice long, &c.

2 Ind. What tongues then defend him?

Or what hand will fuccour lend him?

Even his friends attend him,

To foment the chace.

Chor. Justice long, &c. 3 Ind. Virtue, Jubdaing,

Humbles in ruin
All the proud wicked race.
Truth, never-failing,

Must be prevailing, Falsebood shall find disgrace.

Chor. Justice long forbearing, &c.
